Micah 5:2-4, and Micah 6:6-8

Story Summary: Mercy, Justice, and Peace

We read two different messages given to God's people by the prophet Micah. The first message, in Micah 5:2-4, is one of hope. The prophet tells the people that there will be a king who will come from Bethlehem. For a people facing attacks and invasions from outside areas, these words are words of hope for the future. The second message, in Micah 6:6-8, asks what type of offering the people should bring to God. God's response is that the people should "do justice, love kindness, and walk humbly with God."

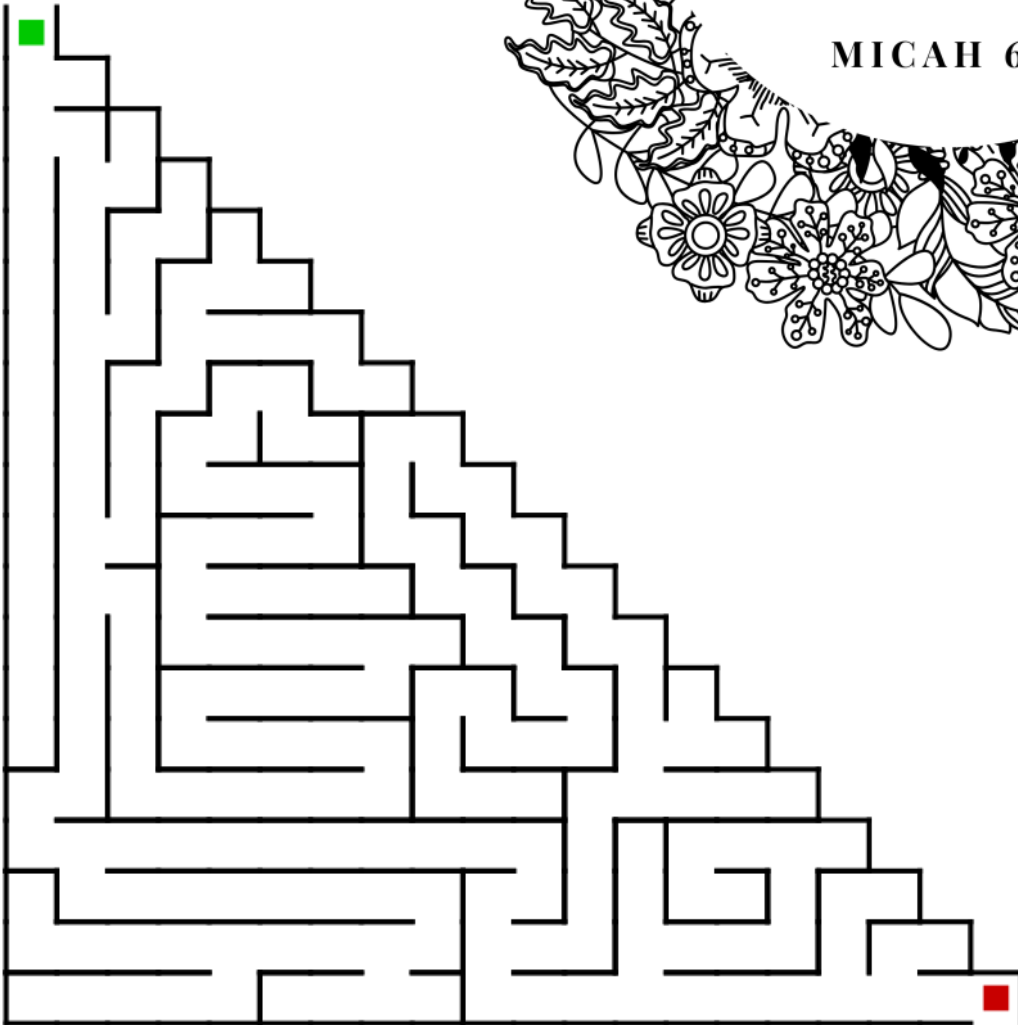

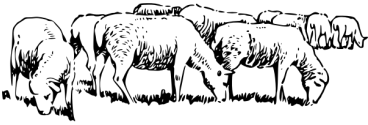

Micah instructs God's people to love God and others through their words and actions. The people are told that God does not only desire their material offerings and worship, but that their whole lives to be dedicated to faithfulness, service, and working for what is right and true in the world. Our response is one of words and action.

The Point:

God's promised shepherd will bring peace and teach us to lead lives of justice and mercy. While the promised shepherd will bring forth peace, God's people are called to respond through lives of justice and mercy for all people. When we work for justice, we do not just work for goodness in the world. We work to help people meet their needs. We show kindness and compassion through serving others. When we walk with God, we live lives of faithfulness, discipleship, and prayer.

Help the sheep find their way to Micah!
